INTRODUCTION

Nurses' wages in Australia are set out predominately in the growing number of nursing industrial agreements reached between the Australian Nursing Federation¹ and employers. The overall growth in agreements since 1996 reflects a move from a centralised industrial relations system to one which is decentralised and where agreements have progressively replaced awards as the principle vehicle for wage movements. Changes to the federal industrial relations laws proclaimed on the 27 March 2006² further decentralised the system and significantly reduced the role of awards in providing a safety net of wages and conditions of employment.

Nursing employment conditions are in the main regulated by federal laws with the major exception being nurses employed in New South Wales, nurses employed in public hospitals in South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania and Queensland, and some nurses employed in the private sector in Queensland which are regulated by the relevant State industrial bodies.

Under the current industrial laws it is expected that collective agreements will continue to be the primary mechanism for determining wages and conditions for nurses in both the public and private sectors and there will be a significant expansion of agreements to cover other areas of nursing employment. Ready access to reliable and accurate wages information will be increasingly difficult in this new environment.

Nurses PAYCHECK, a quarterly publication of nurses' wage rates, seeks to provide an analysis of nursing wage movements across a selection of key classification levels in the public hospital, private hospital and aged care sectors.

Nurses PAYCHECK also compares key nursing classification wage rates between the states and territories, agreements, and across selected nursing areas of employment.

ANF ACT, ANF QLD (QNU), ANF NSW (NSWNA), ANF WA, ANF VIC, ANF SA, ANF NT and ANF TAS.

DEMOGRAPHICS ON THE EMPLOYMENT OF NURSES

The latest published data for the nursing workforce is found in the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW) publication Nursing and Midwifery Labour Force 2005.

According to the AIHW, there were 285,620 nurses licensed³ in Australia in 2005. Of these, 230,578 (81%) were registered nurses and 55,042 (19%) were enrolled nurses.⁴

Not all licensed nurses are employed in nursing, however 89.7% of registered nurses and 87.4% of enrolled nurses are in the nursing workforce. Of these 95.8% were employed in nursing; 1.2% were looking for work in nursing; and 2.9% were on extended leave. Of those nurses not in the nursing workforce, 45.7% were not employed; 47.6% were employed elsewhere; and 6.8% were overseas.⁵

The 2005 data shows that the largest proportion of nurses were employed in clinical practice (91.2% of registered nurses and 91.5% of enrolled nurses).⁶ Of these, 31.5% were employed in the clinical practice areas of medical and surgical nursing; 15.3% were employed in gerontology; 14.4% in intensive care; 8.4% in maternity care; 7.5% in operating theatres; 6.3% in community health; and 5.7% in mental health.⁷

Approximately 59.0% of employed nurses work in public and private acute hospitals; 13.3% in residential aged care facilities; 9.0% in a community setting; 4.3% in psychiatric hospitals/mental health services and 14.4% in other nursing areas.⁸

Two thirds or about 62.6% of all employed nurses work in capital cities or metropolitan areas; 31.2% in rural centres; and 2.2% in remote areas. Nurse numbers in rural areas and remote areas rose by 15.7% and 13.3% respectively while population growth was 2.9% and 0.6% respectively.⁹

It was estimated in 2004 that there were about 67,661 unlicensed nursing or personal care assistants employed in the private residential aged care sector to assist nurses in the provision of nursing care.¹⁰

The AIHW reports an increase in the number of full-time equivalent (FTE) per 100,000 population from 1031 (FTE) in 2001 to 1133 (FTE) nurses per 100,000 population in 2005. This was due to both a 7.1% increase in the number of employed nurses and a 7.5% increase in the average hours they worked.¹¹ AIHW also report that apparent changes in supply should be interpreted with care due to changes in the form of question asked about hours of work. It should be noted however that the 2005 FTE figure of 1133 FTE nurses per 100,000 population figure is below the FTE figure for 2004 (1138) and well below the figure for 1989 (1171).¹²

The nursing workforce in Australia is also ageing. In 2005, the average age for registered nurses was 45.0 years and for enrolled nurses it was 45.5 years. The proportion of nurses aged 45 years or over increased to 55.3% of the nursing workforce, with 19.1% over the age of 55 years.¹³

These figures have implications for nursing education and for workforce planning as over 50% of nurses will be contemplating retirement within the next 15-20 years and it is likely they will be those with the most experience and with specialist qualifications or expertise.

There has been little change over time in the number of males employed in nursing, with males comprising 7.9% of the total national nursing workforce in 2005 (down from 8.4% in 2001).¹⁴

Patient separations in acute public hospitals have remained relatively stable at 45 patient separations per full time equivalent nurse in 2005-2006.¹⁵

Nurses in Australia continue to turn to part time and casual work in an effort to manage their workloads. In 2005, 49.8% of nurses worked part-time (48.2% of the registered nurse workforce and 56.6% of the enrolled nurse workforce). The average number of hours worked per week however increased slightly from 32.8 hours in 2004 to 33 hours in 2005 (33.3 hours for registered nurses and 31.6 hours for enrolled nurses).¹⁶

There has been an increase in the number of people completing undergraduate nursing courses each year between 2002 and 2006.¹⁷ However, while the figures are improving this increase is not considered sufficient to meet the demand for nurses now or in the future.

A report by the Australian Health Workforce Advisory Committee¹⁸ stated that for supply to meet demand, between 10,712 and 13,483 new registered nurses are required to enter the workforce in 2010. Currently just over 6,000 registered nurses graduate each year. The same report also estimated that new enrolled nurse requirements were between 5,734 and 6,201 in 2010.

There are insufficient university places for those eligible people wishing to undertake a nursing course. Figures from the Australian Vice-Chancellors Committee show that 2,866 eligible nursing applicants missed out on an undergraduate nursing place in 2007.¹⁹

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS IN AUSTRALIA

Changes to the legislative framework governing industrial relations

On 7 December 2005, the Australian Parliament passed the Workplace Relations Amendment (WorkChoices) Bill 2005, which contains the most significant changes to the regulation of industrial relations in Australia since 1904, when the federal industrial relations system was established. The changes rely on the corporations' power in the Australian Constitution to increase the coverage and change the content of the federal industrial relations system. The Workplace Relations Amendment (WorkChoices) Act 2005 (WorkChoices Act), and the Workplace Relations Regulations 2006 commenced on the 27 March 2006.

Coverage of new federal system

With a view to creating a single national industrial relations system, the federal system has been extended to cover all constitutional corporations and their employees. The various state industrial relations systems are excluded from covering these employers and employees. While the definition of a constitutional corporation is still unclear, the new federal industrial relations system is expected to cover up to 85 per cent of employees in Australia, although coverage is expected to be lower in some states (for example about 75 per cent of employees in NSW).

Changes to minimum and award wages

Award wages are now adjusted by a new body, the Australian Fair Pay Commission (AFPC), rather than through the annual national wage cases of the Australian Industrial Relations Commission. The AFPC operates according to different parameters, undertaking research and consulting with relevant stakeholders rather than arbitrating in the context of competing claims by unions, employer organisations and government. Wage determinations by the AFPC are likely to be less often than annually. The AFPC will set and adjust:

- the federal minimum wage,
- minimum award classification rates of pay,
- federal minimum wages for juniors, trainees, apprentices and employees with disabilities,
- minimum wages for piece workers, and
- casual loadings.

Changes to award conditions

Awards will no longer contain rates of pay, classifications or career structures. Awards will be subject to a process of rationalisation and further simplification removing a number of existing employment conditions. In the future variation of awards will be limited to:

- rationalisation or simplification,
- removing ambiguity,
- removing objectionable provisions, and
- binding additional employers.

Changes to legislative conditions

There is a new set of four legislated minimum conditions:

- 38 hours maximum ordinary hours of work,
- four weeks annual leave plus an additional one week for qualifying shift workers,
- ten days personal/carer's and two days compassionate leave, and
- fifty two weeks unpaid parental leave.

These four conditions, together with minimum wages, comprise the Australian Fair Pay and Conditions (AFPC) Standard. The conditions in this Standard form the new 'safety net' and apply to all employees covered by the federal industrial relations system. Employees who are currently covered by an award will continue to be entitled to the conditions outlined in the award if those conditions are more generous than the Standard.

Changes to workplace agreements

One of the most significant changes is that workplace agreements no longer need to pass the no disadvantage test (an agreement would not pass this test if it disadvantaged an employee compared to their award wages and conditions). Workplace agreements will only need to comply with the minimum wages and the four minimum conditions in the AFPC Standard.

Specific conditions outlined in the relevant award, such as public holidays, rest/meal breaks, allowances, bonuses, penalty rates, shift/overtime rates and annual leave loading, are taken to be included in an agreement unless expressly altered by the agreement. Agreements cannot contain matters listed as prohibited content as prescribed by the Regulations.

Fairness Test

The Workplace Relations Amendment (A Stronger Safety Net) Act 2007 amended the Workplace Relations Act 1996 by introducing the Fairness Test for workplace agreements lodged on or after 7 May 2007.

The Fairness Test applies to all collective agreements and people on Australian Workplace Agreements (AWAs) who earn less than $75,000 per year.

An agreement will pass the Fairness Test where the Workplace Authority is satisfied that fair compensation has been provided for modifying or removing any or all protected award conditions.

In relation to the Fairness Test, the Workplace Authority must consider monetary and non-monetary compensations and the work obligations of the employee(s). The personal circumstances of the employee(s) may also be considered. In exceptional circumstances the Workplace Authority may also consider other factors such as the industry, location and economic circumstances of the employer or employment circumstances of the employee(s).

Proposed Changes

Following the election of the Labor Government in November 2007, further changes to the industrial relations laws are proposed including the removal of AWAs and the introduction of a new safety net of minimum wages and conditions, including new national employment standards.

PART ONE
PUBLIC, PRIVATE & AGED CARE SECTOR
CLASSIFICATION MAPS

This part of Nurses PAYCHECK provides the current classification structures contained in pre WorkChoices federal and state awards in public and private hospital and aged care sectors, arranged as a classification map across the states and territories.

Each classification has specific definition and criteria both in terms of experience, skill levels and educational requirements and form the basis of the nursing career path.

The classification structures are indicative and their scope may vary depending on the size and geographical location of the establishment and accordingly subscribers are advised to obtain specific advice on the application of the structures in their particular circumstances.

PART TWO

PUBLIC SECTOR NURSES' SALARY DATA

This part of Nurses PAYCHECK provides nurses' wage rates for each state and territory as at 1st March 2008. The salary data provides weekly rates of pay for each classification relevant to the public sector in the particular state or territory.

The rates of pay are derived from the most recent public sector nurses' agreements certified by the Australian Industrial Relations Commission or, in the case of New South Wales, Tasmania and Queensland, the relevant state industrial authority.

It should be noted that the rates of pay are minimum weekly rates only and that awards and agreements provide for a range of additional benefits including various allowances and penalty rates that may increase a nurse's remuneration.

The commencement date for the rates of pay between the states or territories may differ. Please refer to the table on pages 34 and 35 for details.

Classifications and definitions may also vary across the states and territories. Further information should be obtained from the relevant award or agreement, a copy of which may be obtained from the ANF Federal Office - (03) 9602 8500.

PART THREE

PUBLIC SECTOR NURSES' AWARDS/AGREEMENTS

This part of Nurses PAYCHECK provides an overview of the salary increases payable in the public hospital sector in each state and territory. The data also provides information on the tranches of such wage increases.

It should be noted that such agreements often provide a range of additional benefits that may increase a nurse's remuneration.

For further detail on such information, subscribers may ring Anna Amatangelo (03) 9602 8500 and request a copy of the complete agreement.

PART FOUR

PUBLIC HOSPITAL AND PRIVATE AGED CARE COMPARATIVE WAGE INFORMATION

This part of Nurses PAYCHECK provides a range of wage information relating to aged care in each state and territory, together with a comparison between public sector rates and aged care collective agreement rates of pay where applicable.

Comparison with award rates of pay is no longer practicable in light of the changes to the award system and the different transitional arrangements applicable depending on the nature of the business entity or organisation and the relevant pre WorkChoices industrial instrument.

The pre WorkChoices pay and classification structures are no longer contained in federal awards and have become preserved pay scales known as the Australian Pay and Classification Scales (APCS) and are varied by the Australian Fair Pay Commission (AFPC). APCS apply to business entities that fall within the definition of 'constitutional corporations'.

In relation to employees of business entities that do not fall within the definition of 'constitutional corporations', rates of pay are contained in transitional awards. Transitional arrangements provide for the adjustment of pre WorkChoices award rates of pay by the Australian Industrial Relations Commission in accordance with the determination of the Australian Fair Pay Commission on application by the union.

In relation to employees of business entities that do not fall within the definition of 'constitutional corporations' who were covered by a State Award prior to the implementation of the new legislation, rates contained in State awards continue to apply and will be subject to annual adjustment by the respective State Industrial Relations Commissions.

PART 5

NURSING CLASSIFICATION AND SECTOR COMPARISONS

This part of Nurses PAYCHECK provides weekly wage rate information for key nursing classifications found in both federal and state collective agreements.

The information provides a comparative analysis between nursing employment sectors, agreements and between the states and territories. These comparisons are based on the nearest equivalent classification pertaining to the state or territory.

Please note that information relating to the weekly rates of pay contained in State and Federal awards prior to changes to the Workplace Relations Act is no longer provided as part of this analysis.

The complexities of the new legislation, particularly changes to the award system and the application of different transitional arrangements depending on the nature of the business entity or organisation and the relevant pre WorkChoices industrial instrument prevents a general comparison.

Further detail in relation to the changes are included on page 37.

The wages rates included for the private hospital and aged care sectors reflect either federal or state agreements and where possible, are provided as representative of the sector in that state or territory.

For further information contact the Federal Office of the ANF or the relevant ANF State or Territory Branch (see pages 53 and 55) for contact details.

ABOUT THE ANF

The Australian Nursing Federation is the national union for nurses in Australia. The Federation was established in 1924 and is comprised of a national office and branches in all states and territories. Four of the branches are also state registered unions – New South Wales (the NSW Nurses' Association); Queensland (the Queensland Nurses' Union); Western Australia (the Industrial Union of Workers Perth); and South Australia (the Australian Nursing Federation South Australia). New South Wales and Queensland state registered unions did not join the Federation until 1986.

Over the last decade the Australian Nursing Federation has shown a steady increase in membership.
