

anf policy

australian nursing federation

workplace stress prevention¹

The Australian Nursing Federation (ANF) recognises that many nurses, midwives and assistants in nursing (however titled)² in health and other industries are exposed to work-related stress which may affect their psychological and physical well-being.

The ANF objective is the prevention of work-related stress amongst nurses, midwives and assistants in nursing.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) defines stress as:

'the reaction that people may have when presented with demands and pressures that are not matched to their knowledge and capacity and which challenge their ability to cope'

The WHO advises that 'stress occurs in a wide range of work circumstances, but it is often made worse when employees feel they have little support from supervisors and colleagues and where they have little control over work or how they can cope with its demands and pressures'.³

It is the policy of the Australian Nursing Federation that:

1. Nurses, midwives and assistants in nursing have a right to a safe and healthy work place environment and to perform their work without psychological and physical health risks from work-related stress.
2. Work-related stress hazards to be addressed include:
 - Task design, such as fragmented work
 - Work load and/or work pace, such as work overload, high work rate or time pressures
 - Role in the organisation, such as role conflict or uncertainty
 - Work context, such as dealing with difficult patients, residents or visitors
 - Work scheduling, such as shift work, long working hours
 - Employment status, such as insecure employment
 - Physical work environment and equipment, such as lack of space, poor equipment
 - Degree of control over work, such as lack of control over scheduling of work
 - Organisational function and culture, such as poor management of organisational change, poor communication within the workplace
 - Management of work, such as poor leadership, inadequate instruction and training

- Relationships at work, such as bullying, interpersonal conflict, lack of support
 - Workplace violence
 - Fatigue
 - Culturally inappropriate work place policies and practices, such as lack of recognition of cultural differences in policies.
3. The ANF will assist to address work-related stress hazards through the Federation's occupational health and safety (OHS) and industrial activities.
4. The ANF expects employers of nurses, midwives and assistants in nursing to meet their obligations under OHS law to eliminate work-related stress risks where possible and to minimise the risks where elimination is not possible, including through:
- a) Provision of systems of work, including clinical protocols and adequate staffing and skills mix, that are, so far as is reasonably practicable, safe and without risks to health caused by stress
 - b) Design and maintenance, so far as is reasonably practicable, of workplaces in a condition that is safe and without risks to health caused by stress
 - c) Provision to employees of information, instruction, training or supervision to enable work to be performed in a way that is safe and without risks to health caused by stress.
5. The ANF considers that employers should prevent work-related stress through:
- a) Implementation of risk management to identify, assess and control work related stress hazards and risks
 - b) Integration of stress prevention into all aspects of the workplace and systems, including OHS representation, consultation and issue resolution
 - c) Endorsement of a management policy commitment to prevent work related stress
 - d) Communication to raise understanding and involvement in stress prevention in facilities
 - e) Action plans which outline management responsibilities, timelines and resource allocation for stress prevention action at local and organisation levels
 - f) Provision for managers and supervisors of knowledge and skills in work related stress prevention
 - g) Encouraging staff to raise potential stress-related risks.

6. The ANF supports involvement of Health and Safety Representatives (HSRs) in prevention of work-related stress through:
 - a) Consultation and representation with employers
 - b) Facility Health and Safety Committees (HSCs) which formulate, review and disseminate plans for prevention of work-caused stress
 - c) Workplace OHS issue resolution procedures
 - d) Issue of a Provisional Improvement Notice (PIN) or a request for an OHS inspector to attend the workplace if the employer has not acted, after consultation with HSRs, to resolve the stress issue.
7. The ANF will encourage OHS Regulator action for the prevention of work-related stress through:
 - a) Development and promotion of guidance material across the public and private sectors
 - b) Data collection on the extent and causes of stress
 - c) Skills and guidance in stress prevention for Inspectors and Investigators
 - d) Targeted visits to workplaces by Inspectors
 - e) Inclusion of prevention of stress in Business Plans for health and aged care
 - f) Development and implementation of codes and guidance on stress prevention under the National OHS system
 - g) Enforcement of OHS legislation, including strategic prosecutions.
8. The ANF will endeavour to address the causes of work-related stress where possible in Industrial Agreements.
9. The ANF will encourage workplace delegates to work with HSRs on the prevention of work-related stress.
10. The ANF supports involvement of members in the prevention of work-related stress through:
 - a) Reporting work-related stress issues to HSRs and management
 - b) Consultation with HSRs on stress prevention measures
 - c) Recognising the physical manifestation of stress.
11. The ANF will include work-related stress prevention in Federation information, education and training for HSRs, workplace delegates and other members.

12. Supporting the prevention of stress amongst nurses, midwives and assistants in nursing and increasing the capability of the Federation - especially of Organisers, OHS Officers, Health and Safety Representatives and workplace delegates - to prevent work-related stress through education and support.

endorsed november 2010

references

1. This policy should be read in conjunction with the following ANF Policies relating to OHS:
 - Occupational Health and Safety (May 2009)
 - Zero Tolerance of Violence and Aggression in the Workplace (November 2008)
 - Harassment, Discrimination and Bullying in the Workplace (December 2007)
 - Fatigue Prevention

Reference should also be made to the OHS Acts and Regulations.

The following Guidance is also relevant:

- Stop Stress At Work, A Union Guide For Workers, Australian Council of Trade Unions (ACTU), 2003, www.actu.asn.au
 - Stresswise - Preventing Work-related Stress, A guide for employers in the public sector, WorkSafe Victoria, April 2007, www.worksafe.vic.gov.au
 - Work Organisation and Stress, World Health Organisation, 2004, www.who.int/
2. This is a generic term to describe such classifications as assistants in nursing, personal care assistants and personal care workers.
 3. Work Organisation and Stress, World Health Organisation, 2004, page 3.